Contributors

Theresa Jill Buckland is Professor of Performing Arts at De Montfort University, Leicester, England where she supervises graduate dance students and teaches graduate courses in dance ethnography. She holds a doctorate in Folk Life Studies from the University of Leeds (1984). Her publications include journal articles, conference papers and book chapters on the history of dance, dance and cultural theory, English traditional dances and popular dance and video. She is the editor of an international collection, Dance in the Field: Theory, Methods and Issues in Dance Ethnography (Macmillan, 1999) and is currently co-editing a text entitled Dancing across History and Ethnography. She is on the editorial boards of Folklore, Folk Music Journal and Dance Research and is Honorary Secretary of the International Council for Traditional Music Study Group on Ethno-choreology.

Leah Dilworth is Associate Professor of English at Long Island University's Brooklyn campus. She is the author of Imagining Indians in the Southwest: Persistent Visions of a Primitive Past (Smithsonian Institution Press, 1996) and has recently edited a volume of essays entitled, Acts of Possession: Collecting in America (forthcoming from Rutgers University Press).

Dixie Durr is Professor of Dance and Artistic Director to the MSU Repertory Dance Company, holds her Ph.D. from Ohio State University; an M.A. in Theatre from Michigan State University; an M.A. in Anthropology of Human Movement from New York University; and a B.A. in Dance from Butler University. In addition, she is a Certified Teacher of Labanotation, and has earned an Advanced Certification in Labanotation. She served as Chair of the Department of Theatre from 1994-2001. She is currently a member of the Board of Directors of the Congress on Research in Dance. She has been a member of the Professional Advisory Committee to the Dance Notation Bureau, a member of the Board of Directors of the American Dance Guild, and President of the Michigan Dance Association from 1987-1989. She was recognized with a Presidential Citation (1994) by the National Dance Association. She has published in the Journal for the Anthropological Study of Human Movement, the Journal of Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance, the Journal of Aesthetic Education, the Dance Research Journal, and Educational Gerontology.

Brenda Farnell is Associate Professor of Socio-Cultural and Linguistic Anthropology at the University of Illinois (Urbana-Champaign). She holds a Teaching Diploma from I. M. Marsh College of Physical Education, Liverpool; a Diploma in Dance and Dance Education from the Laban Center for Movement and Dance, Goldsmith's College, London University; an M.A in the Anthropology of Human Movement from New York University and a Ph.D. in socio-cultural and linguistic anthropology from Indiana University (1990). She is the author of Do You See what I Mean: Plains Indian Sign Talk and the Embodiment of Action and an award winning CD-ROM, Wiyuta: Assiniboine Storytelling with Signs (University of Texas Press 1995). She also edited Human Action Signs in Cultural Context: the Visible and the Invisible in Movement and Dance (Scarecrow Press 1995). Recent papers include 'Moving Bodies, Acting Selves' (Annual Review of Anthropology 1999); 'Getting Out of the Habitus: An Alternative Model of Dynamically Embodied Social Action', (Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute 2000); and 'Dynamic Embodiment in Assiniboine Storytelling' (Anthropological Linguistics 2002).